Global trade solutions provider Surecomp has acquired German banking software vendor DOS Dialog Orientierte Software GmbH (DOS).

DOS will be renamed Surecomp DOS GmbH and remain in its Hamburg and Cologne offices.

DOS founders, Jochen Oberländer and Klaus Schmelzeisen, will remain with the company and take on new expanded roles within the Surecomp organisation.

Explaining the thinking behind the move Schmelzeisen comments: "Jochen and myself realised that to best serve our clients and employees we needed to position DOS and its products with a strong global operation. When the opportunity to join the Surecomp organisation presented itself, we realised that we had found the ultimate partner. Surecomp has an unrivaled reputation for customer support and product enhancement. The financial strength of Surecomp provides long-term security and stability to DOS customers worldwide. We have every confidence that the combined operation will best serve everyone – DOS customers and employees – in the years to come."

Market Advisory Services (MAS) of Spring Lake, New Jersey advised Surecomp on the acquisition. MAS is an international advisory boutique specialising in commodities, energy and financial information technology.

POLL

Will Russia's recent ban on grain exports result in a significant rise in private risk insurance claims from grain traders unable to fulfil their contracts?

Yes – there will be more claims. The government's actions allow traders, with PRI cover, to make claims through contract frustration.

No - the majority of Russia's
